Control room check list

General

This version differs from the previous version mainly in that a general review has been carried out and that Appendix 1 has been produced in an interactive version to allow digital processing

Introduction

The control room check list has been devised for use in conjunction with the planning of buildings and modifications to buildings where equipment such as computer monitors, keyboards and industrial TV will be installed.

The check list can also be used to provide assistance in establishing a specification of requirements for tenders. It enables ergonomic requirements to be incorporated at an early stage of the project, and it facilitates cooperation between different categories of personnel concerned.

The objective should be to comply with all recommendations (Yes answers). If this is possible, the problem areas should be discussed.
